Description

This is an outstanding example of a rare and very early water resistant Omega automatic made around 1946-47. Everything about the watch is original and untouched, the only item we have replaced is the mainspring as part of the normal movement service. The watch is currently running at plus 1 second per day with a very healthy amplitude of 265 degrees, well within the original Omega specification. The dial is in outstanding original and untouched condition with only the very slightest of patination. All of the lume to the dial and hands is original and completely intact. The crown is the early original mushroom shaped design and it still retains its super sharp serrations. Clearly its had very little use Amazingly the crystal is also original and in near perfect condition with only the slightest hint of the normal yellowing seen on aged early hesalite acrylics. The case is Omegas early water resistant patented design with the case back held in place by a separate locking ring, the case is untouched and unpolished. The original case graining is almost unmarked or worn. The case diameter is 35mm without the winding crown. This is a very rare find and would not be out ...
