Description

A good example of a large stripped pine dresser base dating from the 19th century with panelled ends. It has two large drawers above two panelled cupboard doors enclosing a shelved interior. The drawers and cupboards have turned wooden knobs and there are metal latches for keeping the doors shut. It is in good condition throughout and displays beautifully. It has been thoroughly cleaned while preserving the wonderful aged patina and has an attractive dry finish with a smooth waxed top. The drawers open well and it is generally clean and tidy inside. It is not without signs of age and use and it has had various small repairs and restorations over the years. There are some historic woodworm holes but this hasn't affected it structurally or aesthetically and they have been treated as a precaution. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions please ask. Free delivery within 10 miles of Ashburton, Devon. London £70.
