Description

Rare and original large original acrylic painting on canvas called "Matabele Water Line" by Mick Allard. This painting depicts a colourful "crocodile" of Matabele women off to collect water during the dry season, led by an incongruous clarinetist.  Michael "Mick" Allard was born in England in 1950 and grew up in Zimbabwe. He started as a photographer, but took up painting only after the theft of his equipment in London. He is now internationally known for his lifelike and amusing work, much of which involves his love of Africa and its people. Framed and mounted maximum size including frame 53 inches wide by 43 inches high. c.1990

Internal Ref: 283/2020/PFK
