Description

An interesting pair of antique hand blown glass vases in the Art Nouveau style, each with hexagonal fluted sides and a pair of decorative "angel wing" handles. Pontil marks below. Excellent condition, no damage. A few bubbles within the glass here and there, consistent with age and method. They are consistent with the work of the Stourbridge factory and probably date to c1890. Width dimension is at the widest part of the handles, and depth is taken from the base.
