Description

An 18th century 'three quarters' west country windsor chair constructed from beech and elm. The chair is of typical form that is associated with west country chairs, having bow scrolled arms and a saddle seat with turn H-form stretchers. A very similar example can be found in the book of English country furniture 1500-1900 by David Knell on Page 314 - fig. 485 . Interestingly this particular chair was once painted and was stripped with some kind of file - long before paint stripper was invented and so the chair has developed an almost entirely whittled effect with the files marks still present on the timber. The chair has fantastic colour and patination and is in excellent solid condition. Seat measurements: Height 38cm Width 42cm Depth 40cm
