Description

This brass Dollond of London 5 draw telescope, dating from the late 19th or early 20th century, must be one of the largest hand held types they made, fully drawn it measures just under 44" (112cm). I assume it is for bird watching, stalking or military use and it needs to be rested in the prone position, balanced on the knee or a bipod to maintain a clear view. It shuts down to a neat if heavy package enclosed in its leather case. It is in excellent condition with a clear picture. Size: Fully Drawn - 43.5" (110.5cm) Closed - 13.5" (34cm) Diameter - 3.5" (9cm)
