Description

A charming piece of flatback Staffordshire Pottery which features a rather unscrupulous-looking Tom King astride a handsome horse, standing on a green mound and an inscribed oblong base. Vent hole to reverse. Tom King was an infamous highwayman, a partner of Dick Turpin. In 1735, Tom King was accidentally shot and killed by Dick Turpin. This story was frequently dramatized in the Victorian era. Book reference: Victorian Staffordshire Figures 1835-1875 (Book 1), by A & N Harding, page 264, figure 943. Condition: Very good. No restoration. Minor paint losses to the green mound and the hat. Very slight wear to the gilt strip. Material: Earthenware. All of the items that we advertise for sale have been as accurately described as possible and are in excellent condition, unless otherwise stated. Please note that we are also able to arrange a full shipping service for our customers. We offer a 14 day returns policy. In the unlikely event that you are not completely satisfied with your purchase we will issue a full refund of the purchase price less the return transport costs with an approved courier once an item is received by us in the same condition as it was original.
