Description

A fine 19th century country settle constructed from elm and having a fabulous colour and patina. The bench has a lovely simplistic design, having a two bar back and out swept arms with the front supports being turned with a baluster design. The front and back legs are united by a H-stretcher and the seat is formed by two large elm planks. The settle has had some wood worm damage in the past which commiserate with age, However the overall condition of the settle is excellent.
