Description

William IV mahogany extending dining table This William IV mahogany extending dining table was made circa 1825. It stands on fine turned legs in the most desirable tulip design to each corner each fitted with its original brass cup castors. The table extends to take 3 leaves and these can be used in combination to suit your seating requirements. To place the leaves in place you pull the table open and the high quality mechanism slides on multiple runners. Imagine the conversations that have been struck up over the 200 years this table has been used. The world events that this dining table has lived through. The original owners could well have conversed about the demise of Napoleon in 1821, the soon to be crowned young Victoria. It can now provide service for you and future generations where conversations and fun can be had around this stunning table. 172cms long fully extended 107ins long 120cms closed 48ins 76,5cms high 30ins 122cms wide 48ins 2x leaves each 60cms 23 23 1/2ins 1 leaf 29cms 11 1/2ins All measurements are approximate This William IV mahogany extending dining table is an item of antique furniture that is a very green product that has not affected the envi...
