Description

Antique Victorian mahogany pedestal desk with a tooled leather writing surface & a finished polished back. It's in excellent original condition, dating to around the 1860's period & has plenty of character. This desk has original casters which sit under the plinth bases & it comes apart into three sections for easy transportation. The leather writing surface has a wonderful colour & compliments the desk. The knee-hole space is a generous width for a desk of this size & there is plenty of working space, due to the fact that it has a bit more depth than most desks of this length.
