Description

Samuel Fulton Scottish, (1855-1941) A West Highland Terrier Oil on canvas, signed & dated 1921 Image size: 17.5 inches x 13.5 inches Size including frame: 26.5 inches x 22.5 inches A charming dog portrait painting by Samuel Fulton of a West Highland terrier. The dog is shown seated facing towards the viewer and looking directly out at us. Samuel Fulton was born in Glasgow on 26 April 1855, the son of Samuel Fulton, who owned the Fulton Brothers bakery and his wife Jane (née Strang). He lived with his family at Surrey Street in Glasgow and attended the Free Church Normal School before entering High School. Initially he worked as an apprentice baker in his father's business before starting to paint for a living at around the age of 24. He moved to Airdrie around 1880 where he lived until the late 19th century when he returned to the family business at Surrey Street, but continued painting. Around this time he began exhibiting at the Glasgow Royal Institute of Fine Arts, the Paisley Art Institute as well as in Edinburgh and Stirling. By 1911, he was living in Campsie Glen just outside Glasgow and spent his final years at Wateryetts, Kilmacolm. He died aged 86 at Croydon...
