Description

William IV mahogany tea table This William IV mahogany tea table was made circa 1820. The tea table top swivels and opens to reveal the highly figured mahogany dining surface. When the top is half turned it gives you access to the original baize lined storage area for cutlery or games. It stands on a platform base with four beautifully carved paw feet. The central column that supports the top has fine anthemion carvings to all four sides. This is a spectacular table and really makes a statement without being brash. It is perfect if you have requirements for dining or playing bridge in a smaller dining area or apartment as you can place it against a wall closed and then pull it away again so that it can be used. 102cms wide 40ins 50cms deep closed 19 3/4ins 76cms high 30ins 100cms deep when open 39 3/4ins 102cms wide when open 40ins All measurements are approximate This William IV mahogany tea table is a very green product that has not affected the environment we live in.
