Description

For sale an early Twentieth Century white porcelain wall thermometer by Negretti & Zambra of London. Measuring fourteen inches in height and three inches wide, this example is comprised entirely of a moulded porcelain scale plate with black painted scale showing both Fahrenheit and Centigrade measurements either side of a red spirit thermometer. The bulb of the scale is protected by a brass grill at the base. In very fine condition, there is no damage to the scale plate and the painted scale remains clear and vibrant throughout. A very good example of a less common type of thermometer. Negretti & Zambra were a leading name in the production of meteorological and scientific instruments and had a company history dating back to 1850 although their parents were amongst those Italian emigres that bolstered the British meteorological instrument making industry at the turn of the century. Throughout their long and esteemed history they exhibited at British and international industrial fairs and became makers to both Queen Victoria and Edward VII. Owing to changes in the business, the firm ceased the public retailing of scientific instruments sometime around the late 1960's and...
