Description

Edwardian mahogany extending dining table This Edwardian mahogany extending dining table was made circa 1910 and probably retailed by Waring and Gillow. The table has 2 extra leaves that can be put into place to suit your seating requirements, using the handle that opens the table on a patent winding mechanism. It is of a lightly bowed shape to each end, with a beautifully carved gadrooned carved edge and stands on plain cabriole legs with the magnificent claw and ball feet with concealed castors under. We have re-polished this dining table in the traditional manner and it is now ready to be enjoyed in your home. Imagine the enjoyment this Edwardian mahogany extending dining table will bring as you entertain your family and friends around it. 211cms fully extended with both leaves in place 83ins 107cms deep 42ins 75cms high 29 1/2ins 146cms closed without leaves 57ins 2 leaves each 37cms x 14 1/2ins.
