Description

We often have to completely re-upholster our chairs using hand-dyed leather, however these very attractive examples from the Aesthetic Movement, dating to the 1880's, came to us in an excellent upholstered condition. We felt the deep Victoria Plum colour of the leather complemented their oak frames, and the style of buttoning showed that their upholsterer was skilled and had an eye for detail. Now their frames have been sensitively restored and polished, and their castors serviced by our metal work specialist, they make a handsome and understated pair of chairs, that would sit comfortably within a contemporary or period interior.
