Description

This is an antique tea cabinet. An English, oak spice or apothecary case, dating to the Georgian period, circa 1800. Pleasingly heavy Georgian piece Displays a desirable aged patina Dark English oak with fine grain interest Wisps of medullary rays shine through the wax polish finish Field panel front door with carved patera Unusual left-hand opening Dressed with a shaped brass escutcheon — lock absent The door secured by an iron hook and eye clasp A suite of nine drawers, the lowest of which being a wide, single drawer Each drawer finished with a small brass pull Raised upon a continuous plinth base This is a charming and unusual antique tea cabinet. From the dark English oak, to the carved patera and reassuring weight, this is a fine example of Georgian craftsmanship. Solid joints and construction, delivered waxed, polished and ready for the home.
