Description

Superb pair of English Art Deco glazed terracotta urns on pedestals by the Leeds Fireclay Company c.1930. Suitable for either internal or external use, either side of a staircase or terrace perhaps. 17" diameter urn planters (with drainage in the base) with a stylized leaf pattern to the sides. Raised on broad moulded pedestals (height 29") and sold together with two short lengths of matching balustrade. All finished in a buff coloured glaze. Urn and pedestals are in very good condition with only a few minor chips, likewise the caps and plinths of the balustrade. Unfortunately several of the balusters (though complete) have been broken. The Leeds Fireclay Company was established in 1889 as a merger of various manufacturers in the Leeds area including the celebrated makers Burmantofts. Their glazed tiles and architectural elements were designed to be very hard wearing and could be scrubbed clean of the grime of Britain's industrial cities. They were used on numerous important buildings across the country including London's famous Art Deco gem the Michelin building. Dimensions: total height 40", length (plinth plus balustrade) 49", width 20".
