Description

This is a really unusual Dutch chandelier with glass orange flowers wired to the frame. It has white beads to create the centre of the flower and red spheres to look like grapes. The construction of the chandelier is a tube going down the centre which supports the weigh. It has chains around the top - this is purely for decoration. There is a brass frame, which has mesh in-between and the glass is attached to this mesh. It is finished with a brass finial and is a really interesting, unusual piece - we haven't seen anything like this before. C1920-C1940
