Description

Early C19th Regency period mahogany framed robing mirror or 'Psyche' of large proportions. Turned mahogany-framed dressing mirror raised on a 'cheval' type base of shaped sabre leg supports fitted with original square cast brass box castors and wheels. The elaborately turned frame with shaped acorn-type finials and united by twin turned lateral bars to the base and one to the top of the frame, providing strength and stability. The mahogany supports having a wide gentle sweep, again providing excellent stability. The original mercury-silvered mirror plate in a mahogany cross-grained edge frame. The sides fitted with finely-cast gilt brass adjustable knobs or stays, with rosette detail. The brass screw-in knobs on gilded brass plates and fitted with original turned mahogany 'washers' to grip the frame and allow precise and stable adjustment of the mirror angle. The mirror frame having original mahogany multi-panelled back, unusually fitted with 3 original miniature brass rings to the top bar, which can be pulled up to release the back panel from the frame, perhaps providing a 'secret' compartment behind the plate. In excellent dry, fresh-to-market untouched...
