Description

We are delighted to offer this Victorian solid silver teapot made by renowned maker John & George Angell in London, 1846. The overall quality and craftsmanship on this teapot are very impressive with elegant yet unique angular panels and hand-engraved embellishments along the borders. The spout features a long and curved form with heavily chased scrolls. The handle presents a very elegant yet ergonomic design, allowing the teapot to be held with ease. The interior remains in excellent clean condition with no leaks and in useable condition. The top is covered with a heavy lid that features further ornamentations and a pointed finial. The teapot is supported by four cast-silver feet which are equally decorated and embellished with chased motifs. A superb choice for collectors of traditional Victorian English silverware for dining tables etc and equally practical and indulging for usage. Elegant and desirable Angell silver teapot. Magnificent geometric and angular design throughout the exterior. Clean and useable condition, ideal for practical usage.
