Description

Circa 1910-1940 a pair of heavy, decorative brass table lamps that were once candlesticks and converted to electricity some years ago. They have been professionally polished but not lacquered, and both are in very good condition. They measure 26cm in height up to the top of the lamp holders, the actual candlesticks without the candle tube added is 20cm in height and they have 10.5cm square bases with little feet underneath. The pierced brass work on the two tiers and the base is beautifully done, and the decorative work is reflected around the candle cup at the top. The lamps either need to be totally rewired, or the buyer may prefer to return them back to candlesticks, we have left them as is. Postage and packing within the UK mainland only is included in the price and for outside areas or abroad, please contact us for a delivery quote.
