Description

The city of Isfahan was the capital of the Safavid Empire. Shah Abbas set up many court craft workshops, including carpet weaving workshops. The tradition has survived until today, and Isfahan rugs are among the most admired and prized of Persian rugs. This rug, woven in the mid-20th century, is true to this tradition. It is woven on a silk foundation, and is very finely knotted. The wool is the finest Kurk wool and the workmanship is superb. It has the workshop signature (Mahdi Dar Dashti) and it depicts a scene from the poems of Sa'adi, a contemporary of Hafez. This is a very jewel-like rug which has survived the generations in perfect condition. It is ideal as a wall hanging, adding elegance and style to many a setting.
