Description

We are delighted to offer this Victorian solid silver tankard made by Henry William Curry in London, 1870. The exterior features a plain mirror-like finish with a traditional baluster form. The handle is very sturdy with a chased Acanthus thumbpiece on the top. The base of the tankard is supported with a widened foot with a beaded design around the border. The interior remains in good condition, no gilding is present, however, the colour reflection makes the interior appear slightly yellowish/gilt due to the shadows etc. There are no leaks in this cup and thus liquids can be held within - the capacity is just shy of 1 pint. Full set of English hallmarks are marked on the side of the cup. SIZE Size (mm) H:135mm W:125mm including handles. Size (inches) H:5.31 W:4.92 including handles. Weight: 340 grams (12 oz) CONDITION Great Condition - The cup is in great antique condition with no major damage or issues, only minor surface scratches to be expected with its age.
