Description

A silver plated Claret jug circa 1900 and made by James Deakin and sons of Sheffield. The jug has a wide base with a tapered body, the hand molded glass being decorated with stylish swags. The silver plated top having a finely decorated short spout and a suspended handle with a swans head at the top. The rounded lid having a small finial enabling the top to be operated with your thumb. There is some very slight ware to the silver plate commensurate with age, but overall the claret jug is in excellent condition.
