Description

Very Large 19th c. Landscape Painting by Thomas Creswick R.A. This is a very nice landscape painting from the mid 19th century. The painting depicts a herd of cows in a stream and a flock of sheep sheltering between a group of trees. To the right is a lady on horse back in the stream who could be the herder of the livestock. To the far right is a lady walking across a wooden bridge holding a basket on her head. At the far left one can see a farmstead and to the left of the trees one can see in the distance a village. At the bottom left corner underneath the tree trunks there stands the signature T. Creswick R.A. Thomas Creswick (1811 - 1869) was an English landscape painter and illustrator, he is one of the best-known member of the Birmingham school. We have chosen to leave the painting in it's original state as found, to leave a restoration and or framing to the expert. The painting has been found in a dry attic, and must have been there for many of years, as there are no damp patches or paint loss, and no holes, the wooden frame what holds the canvas is in a dusty but good condition (missing a couple of stretchers), as stated the painting comes without a frame...
