Description

Large Georgian mahogany dining table This Large Georgian mahogany dining table was made circa 1820 using the best mahogany available at the time. It is made in 3 large sections each with its own pedestal base. The bases having superb turned columns with the 4 swept legs each coming from this and ending in fine cast brass toes with rolling castors under. Imagine the pleasure this table will bring you, either when it is not in use or when you are entertaining your family and friends. A Georgian mahogany dining table like this, would have been made for an important house and would have been a custom-made order, not one off the peg. The solid mahogany top with grain and figuring that is full of life and colour. We have restored this table painstakingly by hand, after the many coats of polish has been applied, it is then finished with a good wax patina, by doing this by hand it gives the mahogany a depth of colour. Our images do not do this Georgian dining table justice. The upkeep is easy, just use a soft duster as you would any dining table. The dense mahogany timber used for this table, would have been transported by a large merchant sailing ship, across the Caribbean ...
