Description

Two George III brass fireside stands or footmen c.1800. Used to keep plates and dishes etc. warm beside an open fire in a dining or living room (rather than a kitchen), hence their decorated form. Two good examples with particularly attractive pierced detail to the tops and sides and elaborately shaped aprons. Note also the raised edges around the top, a useful practical detail. Swept front legs for extra stability, unusually the smaller stand has iron rather than brass legs. Both in excellent original condition. Dimensions: width 14½"/13½", depth 11½"/10½", height 12"/11½".
