Description

A lovely oak chair dating from the late 18th / early 19th century. It is a lovely country piece with shaped arms and a square back enclosing decorative carved splats. It has a square planked seat and stands on square tapering legs joined by a central stretcher. It is a good comfortable chair with a broad seat and it is in good condition for its age. It has developed a lovely aged patina. There have been a few old repairs and an old shrinkage split in the seat which has been filled in but structurally it is very sound. It has been gently cleaned and polished and it displays beautifully and is ready for use. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask. Nationwide delivery available through our network of reliable couriers.
