Description

Edward Benjamin Herberte was an English sporting and animal painter from the latter part of the 19th century. His main work was painting equestrian scenes such as fox hunting and point to points as well as rural village views. This work is somewhat similar in style and composition to that of John Frederick Herring Snr. The painting is in excellent condition and is an oil on canvas that has been laid down onto a panel of wood. It is monogramed E.H and dates from the 1880's.
