Description

A beautifully patinated Georgian yew wood vernacular tripod table; the well figured tilt-top crossbanded in holly above a wrythen turned stem which is raised on well drawn cabriole legs terminating in shaped pad feet. Circa 1765 This tripod table retains a superb colour and patination and is a charming example of a country cabinet-maker following fashionable trends. He has used native timbers; yew wood and holly for its construction and the simplified wrythen turning is copying fashionable decorative details.
