Description

An early 18th century oak dresser of small proportions. A gorgeous little piece that would fit anywhere as it is only 72" high. It has an oak potboard, 4 turned legs at the front and a pretty apron below the 3 drawers. The brass handles are old replacements. Originally it had swan neck handles. Very unusually, it has an oak panel at the sides of the base uniting the front and back legs. This is completely original. It is in excellent condition, with a lovely waxed patina. One of the iron hooks along the top has broken off.
