Description

An attractive oak and elm chair dating from the early 19th century, most likely originating from Wales. It is a lovely country piece with shaped arms and a ladderback with carved geometric splats. It has a solid square seat and stands on turned legs. It is a good comfortable chair with a broad seat and it is in good condition for its age. It has developed a lovely time worn patina with wonderful burred wood on the seat. There have been a few old repairs and an old shrinkage split in the seat but structurally it is strong and sturdy. There are signs of old woodworm which has all been treated as a precaution and haven't affected the piece structurally or aesthetically. It has been gently cleaned and polished and is ready for use. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask. Nationwide delivery available through our network of reliable couriers.
