Description

For sale, fine late Georgian III period flame mahogany stick barometer by Dollond of London. A super quality piece, this fine instrument is comprised of a flame mahogany body with a broken swan neck pediment surmounted and turned ivory vase finial to the centre. The tips of the swan's neck are also emblazoned with small circular ivory cartouches and the outer edges ebonised to correspond with detailing on the body below. The simple and superbly engraved silvered scale below provides just three weather readings to the left hand side (Fair, Change & Rain) and scale reading 27 to 31 inches of barometric pressure to the right. It further incorporates a simple hand operated Vernier for more precise reading against the tube. The glass tube is completed with a brass domed stay at its peak and the prestigious London Instrument Maker's name of Dollond London is engraved either side. The scale and tube are both protected behind a glazed and mahogany framed door which can be secured by lock and key to the right hand side. The trunk of the barometer has a graduated edge running its length with ebony banding to accentuate the beautifully chosen flame mahogany to the centre. A large...
