Description

A very attractive 17th century oak plank coffin with a triple panelled front and chip carved decoration. The coffin is of early pegged construction and boasts thick oak planks, making it very substantial. There is a small area of historic woodworm to the bottom front right (please see photographs). The original iron loop hinges remain present; a later brass hinge has been fitted to secure the lid in place when upright. The colour of the oak is wonderful; warm, glowing and tactile. At approximately 350 years old, this coffin is full of character and will be a charming feature in any home.
