Description

Not a decorative carpet but a rare 'Verneh' or Caucasian cover from the mid 19th century. Used to cover bedding during the day or to decorate the divan, this multi purpose item was also a display of the weaving talents within the family. Sadly had at least one main border cut off, these flat weaves are popular with collectors around the world and can fetch very large sums of money at specialist auctions. Decorated with bird and animal motifs, embroidered on to a fine kilim ground they are real works of art. Despite the damage inflicted, this piece still has tremendous visual appeal and charm, making a very effective wall hanging. Great conversation piece and something you will not grow tired of looking at. In good condition it might fetch £10-15,000 at a specialist auction. Price includes 20% VAT and can be reduced by that amount for export
