Description

This decorative pair of Indian clubs which are made of a dark heavy wood date from c1900, have a wonderful rich patina and feel really heavy in the hand. This pair of clubs which are approx 44 cm (17 1/2") in length make very nice decorative home or gym display items and are in great usable condition. Indian clubs are a type of exercise equipment used for developing strength. They were swung in certain patterns as part of an exercise program and were popular in the late 1800s and early 20th century. Weight: 1152 g for the pair. Condition: Very good antique condition with the usual chips, dents and wear leaving a great look. Interesting display items, home decor, or gym or decoration. Please note that only the Indian clubs are included and any other items in the pictures are for scale only.
