Description

A fine example of an early 20th century hall stand for umbrellas and sticks. This piece is in original untouched country-house condition and is ready to be used exactly as it is. If preferred, it can always be cleaned and polished of course. It has a tubular brasswork five-division top with three turned finials, supported by three columns with a solid cast iron drip-tray base. A good space-saving design that would grace any hallway. This Edwardian piece is English, dating from c.1900 to c.1920.
