Description

Edwardian oak refectory dining table This Edwardian oak refectory dining table was made circa 1910. It would have been made in one of the best workshops of the period who made quality oak furniture. More recently (in the last 50 years) it was bought from Liberty's when they had an antique department. The solid oak top of a lovely faded golden colour has breadboard ends (the crossbar at each end, that was to keep the wood flat and stable) The trestle base with the solid thick oak silhouette shaped end supports with the stretcher bar running down the centre. The feet below the ends are more stepped than is usually seen and this adds to this Edwardian oak refectory dining tables general look. This Edwardian oak refectory dining table is very easy to transport to and around your home as it breaks down into pieces. 198cms wide 78ins 81cms deep 32ins 72cms high 26 1/2ins Measurements are approximate, whilst we take care in measuring there may at times be a very slight difference.
