Description

A very attractive Victorian brass and leaded stained glass hall lantern, c.1890. The lantern is four-sided with all sides boasting an identical stained glass design. The glass is wonderfully original with visible bubbles and waves throughout. One of the clear panels to one side has a small crack (please see photographs) but this is not particularly obvious from a distance and does not detract from the piece. All other panels of glass remain in an excellent condition. The lantern has a pierced brass gallery and apron with desirable verdigris to the interior which highlights the age of the piece and adds to its character.
