Description

In exceptional condition a light oak cased National time recording clock for recording employee working times. Restored extensively in the past with an envelope containing a series of restoration photographs in the bottom drawer where there are also hand written notes on time setting & movement/mechanism adjustments. Also in the drawer is the chromed winding key & a number of time cards. Until a few years ago we are advised that this attractive probably industrial clock was on loan & displayed in the West Country in a small rural museum. Circa 1920 this item which has a wall fixing bracket is a highly decorative & interesting industrial item of significant quality. The oak case has a depth of 30cm but with the projecting pedal is 35cm in overall depth.
