Description

A taxidermy case of Ptarmigan birds, they are part of the grouse family found in Scotland, the white feathers are their winter plumage which changes for the spring and summer. This is a Victorian set of 5 birds in a wood case all original circa 1880/90. Very nice condition. Delivery for this would have to be by a courier I use who I know would take care of, I will not send by any other method as they will not get there in good condition, they would get tipped upside down, etc. or you can collect if that is your preference.
