Description

This mahogany cigar box which dates from the 19th century is a charming piece that has a wonderful patina and would have been originally been used by a butler or waiter to serve cigars. The handsome box has a brass hinged lid that lifts to reveal four numbered compartments and a rear mahogany handle that has a wonderful tactile feel. Today this could be used as a butler or waiter's serving tray for serving teas or similar items and would make a wonderful usable piece for a hotel, bar, shop or Gentleman's Club. This tray also looks fantastic on display so would make a super decorative piece for the home. Condition: Wonderful antique condition with signs of use and wear showing it's true age and with a rich patina. Please note that only the box is included and any other items in the pictures are for display only.
