Description

This 12" dial wall clock has a mahogany case with a cast bezel. The original dial is painted with Roman numerals and the words London County Council where it would have originally hung in an office or hall. The movement is a single fusee and is fully serviced. The case has two doors one on the right hand side and one on the convex bottom which are both latched as well as the main bezel door on the front which is also held with a latch. This classic old fusee was probably made from around 1940 - 1950 but has a very substantial movement and heavy lead filled pendulum bob.
