Description

This stylish and elegant pair of English 18th century brass candlesticks stand on stepped and moulded square bases decorated with a beaded design. The tall slender stems have reeded decoration to the lower half and are plain above. They terminate in square candle sconces decorated with the same beaded moulding. These candlesticks are fitted with pushing rods for removing the candle stub which is accessed from the underside. One of the finger buttons is missing but they both function well. In good condition with a well polished old lustre. Circa 1770
