Description

This Primitive Occasional Table, in the form of a Joint Stool, has character by the bucketload. With through Mortice and Tenon joints to the framing, showing a level of skill in its construction and of pleasing proportions this Table sits very well. Displaying a wonderful patina, with no shame about the movement of the timber, all its faults and curiosities are displayed with pride, and it looks all the better for it. Not afraid to show its history first and foremost, this table would look good in any interior décor style and would be sure to attract plenty of attention wherever placed.
