Description

An Antique Edwardian Sterling silver desk note pad which has a plain shield shaped body with a loaded base, a compartment to hold the paper note pad, a spring mechanism to operate the lid and a section to house the pencil. This silver note pad would be perfect to display on a desk or small table and would make an extremely useful and acceptable gift. It has been designed in such a way that when the pencil is slotted into position, it keeps the lid of the note pad closed. Although the pencil is not original to the note pad, it fits perfectly well and enhances the overall appearance of this silver desk note pad. It was hallmarked in London for 1901 by W and G Neal and remains in excellent condition. Complimentary postage is included within the price of this silver note pad.
