Description

Stuart Lloyd British, (1858-1926) Evening Glow Oil on canvas, signed Image size: 19.5 inches x 29.5 inches Size including frame: 27.5 inches x 37.5 inches An atmospheric painting of boats on a river at sunset by Stuart Lloyd. A group of figures are shown in front of a cottage as fishermen in their boats prepare to head ashore. In the distance a hay barge sails towards a church and other buildings. Stuart Lloyd or Walter Stuart Lloyd was a painter of river and landscape scenes who was born in Upper Clapton, near Hackney, London on 17 March, 1858. He was baptised Stuart Lloyd and was the son of James Lloyd, a publisher and Hannah Helen Durham whose income allowed them to live comfortably and give their children a good education. His older brother Thomas James Lloyd (1849-1910) was also an artist. During the late 1860's the family moved to Walmer in Kent and at some point in the 1870's he went to Paris to study at the studio of Bonnat. Upon his return, he settled in Worcester living at Waverley House, Cromer Gardens in Henwick. He began exhibiting at the Royal Academy from 1875 as well as at the Royal Society of British Artists where he was elected a member at the age...
