Description

A stylish pair of late Regency tall brass andirons or fire dogs dating to c1840. The impressive look of these fire dogs is created by the elements of classical design so typical of the classical Regency era - the scrolled feet, the bulbous base encircled with an egg and dart band, and the spiralled upper part rising to a banded finial. Behind the fire irons or tools can lie on an extensive bar with keeper, supported by an inverted foot. The fire dogs are quite heavy, a mark of quality and fitness for purpose. They will embellish any fireplace.
