Description

An exceptional eight day quarter chiming longcase clock retailed by Dent. The case is made from well figured mahogany and survived remarkably well with very little fading. The bottom of the clock stands on Georgian style bracket feet then the base has a raised shaped panel. The trunk has a long, elegant door with a beautiful bevel edged glass showing us the pendulum and weights. Above the door we have a little panel of carving then the hood. This has amazing sound frets each side to allow the beautiful chimes to be heard and these delicate frets have survived perfectly. A superb ball finial just finishes the clock off at the very top. The clock has three brass cased weights; one to drive the clock itself, another for the quarter chiming and the last one for the hour chiming. These weights are most attractive and the pulleys carrying them are also finished to a very high standard. The metal rod pendulum has an attractive brass bob and can be seen swinging behind the glass. The dial is well decorated with fine cast spandrels in the corners and to the arch. The centre has a main silvered chapter ring with applied black Arabic numerals; seconds are shown with a subsidiary dial,...
