Description

George V mahogany 3 pillar dining table This George V mahogany 3 pillar dining table was made circa 1920 by a cabinetmaker using antique timber that was redundant. In those days there was a surplus of good timber around from antique tables that were no longer needed or out of fashion. This allowed the cabinetmaker to be able to choose fabulous timber to construct the tops. Hence as you will see the depth of colour and warmth of the surface. It stands on the 3 pillar columns with the triple legged base at each end and a quadruple base at the centre. Each with a turned central column and the elegant splay legs off that then ending with the cast brass claw toes and rolling castors under. This George V mahogany 3 pillar dining table will comfortably seat Imagine the pleasure ownership of this magnificent dining table will give and the countless times you will enjoy entertaining your family and friends around it.
